What AutoCAD can do As of 2018, Autodesk claims more than 10 million licensed users and over 2 million active users. It is one of the world's most popular desktop CAD applications, with over 350,000 installations on Microsoft Windows. With AutoCAD, users can create complex architectural drawings and models for both industry and residential users. AutoCAD features include: Easy and intuitive 2D drafting Create drawings and models in multiple 2D and 3D modes. Use tools for drafting and modeling. Import and edit 2D and 3D drawing files. Save in DWG, DWF, DWFx, DXF, and other file formats. Connect to external file systems to include CAD models, drawing files, and layers. Import and edit common vector and raster graphic formats. Connect to cloud-based services and sources for data. Use tools and commands to prepare and output drawings. Integrate with cloud services to share projects and data on the web. Record a drawing session for later editing. Integrate with other Autodesk applications to prepare for the future. Revit, the flagship product of Autodesk, is a 3D modeling and building information modeling (BIM) application that combines design, building information modeling, and documentation features. What Revit can do In 2018, Revit announced over 1.7 million licensed users and over 200,000 active users. Revit features include: 3D models and animations Create and edit 3D models. Use 3D modeling tools to design and create 3D models. Use tools to document and build your model. View and edit drawings, sections, and details. Import and edit 2D and 3D CAD files. Save and exchange drawings and models in DWG, DWF, DWFx, DXF, and other file formats. Use tools and commands to edit, manipulate, and annotate a model. View and edit other Autodesk applications such as AutoCAD and Microstation. Create and edit architectural drawings and models. Import and edit architectural and engineering drawings. Use layers to organize and manage models. Integrate with cloud services and features to access 3D models, drawings, and updates. Prepare and render 2D and 3

This image was found in an old wooden chest in the basement. It was a message and a warning to my ancestor, E.J.Curry. E.J.had lost his brother, Larry to the war. He was one of the many casualties from the many battles fought during WW II.He was a friend of mine and a great man. I had no idea the box I had found was related to him, until his son saw my post on Facebook asking if anyone had family stories of WW2 in New Mexico. He let me know about the box and his father, and sent me this photo. I was shocked when I saw it. The way the picture was tacked up, together with the message "goodbye" written in his hand, I was convinced he was being held prisoner. This was a far cry from the guys who were handed out through the 3rd party Recon Corp. I was in contact with Recon back then, and they told me they only did this if it was a serious matter. I was working for the US government at the time. Needless to say, I sent Larry to the US. As you can see, no more of these boxes were found. I know the person that had the box, and he was not a close relation of Larry. I wonder if my ancestor, E.J., also did not find a box like this in the basement. It's a mystery, but the message from the ghost has not changed since 1943. I plan to go back to New Mexico to discover what I can about Larry's fate. Maybe I'll find a box too! Children and adolescents' cognitions regarding the life cycle. Two studies examined the cognitions of 12- to 16-year-old children (Study 1) and adolescents (Study 2) regarding the stages of the life cycle. Studies 1 and 2 found that they viewed themselves as old (old self) compared to a peer (aged-matched peer) at approximately the same developmental stage. Study 3 replicated Study 1 and found that boys and girls viewed themselves as old and that this age-related self-age difference was greater for boys than girls. Study 4 found that children and adolescents viewed peers as older than themselves at equivalent stages of the life cycle. Results were discussed in terms of adolescents' cognitive representations of the self.

Schools For parents or carers who have a child at our school or are considering becoming a parent/carer at our school. We would welcome the opportunity to talk with you about your child's learning. Please contact the school office if you are interested in finding out more information on parenting classes and the process of becoming a parent. We look forward to meeting you!

Pastoral Care Team Children and young people at the school often have specific pastoral needs. Our pastoral care team seeks to make the school a home for each child. We make ourselves available to the children and their families at a number of key times throughout the day including drop-in times. We provide a number of services for the children and their families including support with work/homework; teacher support; help with administration and support with accessing health services and a supportive network of family, friends and others. We are committed to the development of all children, recognising the unique needs of those children who are vulnerable, those who experience disadvantage and those children who are LGBTIQ+ The school has many avenues through which we can support children, young people and their families:

Amber Brown, the Alabama woman who is accused of raping a 12-year-old girl, was charged Tuesday with attempted murder after authorities said she stabbed her boyfriend. Police said she stabbed the man with a knife while he slept Monday. Police said Amber Brown, 26, was a live-in friend of the man and his son. She is accused of raping a 12-year-old girl earlier in the day Monday. Brown is being held without bond. She is due in court Wednesday. Download the NBC News app for breaking news and politics
