ToDo95 is a simple and intuitive application that allows you to create to-do lists and track upcoming appointments. To begin with, the interface is very simple and looks like a basic calculator with four tabs that show different options for each function. The first one contains the to-do list where you can input the title, date and priority, and then click the check box to create a task. Another tab is the appointment for those who need to make appointments for meetings or interviews. This one allows you to insert the title, time, date, alarm time and type of alarm, and, once in a day, flash the list and change the alarm settings. The other two tabs are just for other notes and reminders. One shows the log, with the text and color you select, and the other displays the calendar that shows today's appointments. There are also two icons in the system tray with options to play the sounds you select and to have notifications flash on the screen. Note: To download the ToDo95 app, you need Android 2.3 or higher, and 1 GB of space. The application is $0.99. Read more at Click app for more! To start, you need to set a list, so all your notes and notes will be stored in this new list. You can create new notes by selecting a title, description and date, or, when you want to add a reminder, just insert the title and the time for the event. There are also two options to add a note, choose the place where you want to write it, then write it, and, when you finish, click the check box to save it. This list allows you to share it via social networks, and also print it. When an item is due, the icon will flash and the log will show a note with the current date and the same color, if you choose it. Moreover, 1d6a3396d6
