An entire family's lives ruined in what can only be described as pure negligence. On April 11, 2018, a young boy named Jacob Turley was collecting a mollusc shell from a manhole that led to the Santa Clarita Valley. Instead of crawling into the sewer, the 16-year-old boy stumbled upon a bloodstained bed sheet and a secret compartment inside the manhole. How long had that been there? Who knows, maybe never, but for the San Fernando Valley's residents and entrepreneurs, that meant a Pandora's box of intrigue, crime, and intrigue that would spell major trouble for the community. When police responded to the scene that fateful day, they found a freshly dug hole with a couple sticks poking out of it. Inside of it was a wire coat hanger, a drug bag, and a child's wrist watch. After being first thought to have been a homeless man, Jacob was identified as the one responsible for this hole. Jacob was the Turley family's only child. His mother, April, worked as a public school teacher, and his father, Bill, worked as a disability income service representative. Bill passed away from a stroke in 2013, and both parents spent time at Sunrise Senior Living in Valencia, California. Jacob was also raised in the community. "I'm like oh, maybe he went to school in this area," said Jennifer Turley, the boy's older sister. "No, he didn't. I grew up there, and he didn't." The Turley's didn't have any reason to hide their storage spot, but in the week leading up to April 11, nothing would have led them to think that was anything but a manhole. The police department first called the owners of the property, and the cops told them that the San Fernando Valley was in the middle of a major cleanup effort and that they may have been the last people to see Jacob. Does the Two-Slit Experiment prove that matter cannot be in two places at one time? That is, does the experiment show that matter cannot be found at both slits or in both paths at once? No, as this is a non- quantum experiment where the photon (light) behaves classically and not like the wave-particle duality of quantum theory. This experiment is about light and not about the matter or quantum physics. the following question is if the two
