Collectible figurines! The serene (and creepy) art-style of Danse Macabre: Thin Ice The grand ending theme by Ben Powell The Soundtrack by Greg Pliska A Murder Mystery and a bonus chapter! Your biggest fans are dead, but now you're the up-and-coming star of a popular figure skating show! Your rival and one-time love, Brenda Carter is now skating with you, which means there's an opening in the cast in your prima donna spot. You know you're not great on ice, but what does this mean for you and your future? Ruth Fisher may have gotten unlucky, but now you have to answer for her death in the town where it happened. And if you're lucky, there might be a chance to get closer to Ruth's friend, Aisha Wright, but you'll have to get there first. Each chapter will take place in one of the town's four zones. Here's what you need to know about each: - Black Carpet District - Joe Novinsky, a local businessman, hired Ruth to take part in his latest stunt: having a professional figure skater carrying him across the ice during his public skating tour. - Perfect! Rosewood District - Joe's best friend and local entrepreneur, Fred Beauregard, wants to set up a new ice arena with Ruth as the star. But before he gets his hands on the property, he needs to convince people that it's Ruth's town. - Perfect! Carriage Square District - Aisha Wright is a rising star in figure skating, but being an amateur isn't cheap. Ruth is willing to let Aisha have her ice practice space, free of charge. - Perfect! Rosewood District - The ice rink won't be enough to make Ruth a star, so she needs to find a way to exploit her newly-found celebrity. How's she going to do that? That's up to you. If Ruth survives this long, there's also a chance she'll meet her father and sister. About Ruth Fisher: Ruth is a professional figure skater with a huge fan base and lots of admirers. But Ruth's life takes a dramatic turn when her biggest fan, Big John Patterson, is found dead in the park. Now Ruth is on the verge of losing everything, all on account of a fan that's just too much for her to handle. Who would want to kill someone who's the only person who truly cares about her

The Train: A daring and deadly escape behind enemy lines! August, 1944. The German stranglehold on Europe is slipping. The liberation of occupied France looms on the horizon. In an effort to escape the advancing Allied forces, the Germans begin a desperate evacuation of men, machinery and the spoils of war. On the outskirts of Metz, a heavily armed train of the Third Reich sits sweltering in the dead of night. On board lies a secret cargo. Renoirs, Monets, Picassos the entire plundered art collection of France are to be smuggled to Berlin under a cover of darkness. Once in Hitler's clutches, these priceless masterpieces could be lost to mankind forever. Only you can stop it! In The Train, you are a leader in the French Resistance. Your mission: capture the armored "war train" and successfully commandeer it through enemy lines for a rendezvous with the Allies at Riviere, Normandy. With the help of a brave corps of Resistance fighters, you'll engineer a WWII locomotive and engage in battle with enemy forces on land, air, and sea. Traps, ambushes and sabotage may await you at any station, any bridge or any crossing. Enemy planes will strafe you in heated pursuit. Gunboats can blast you right off the rails. Shovel coal or shovel your own grave. Gameplay The Train: Escape to Normandy: The Train: A daring and deadly escape behind enemy lines! August, 1944. The German stranglehold on Europe is slipping. What's new in Broken Pieces:

“Daddy, can we go on the ferry?” Emily asked as she wiggled free from her father’s embrace and started towards the exit of the restaurant. (An exit if I’d thought to think in terms of a recession back in the early ‘80s.) “Sure,” said my father who, along with my Aunt Gert, was waiting on the sidewalk with a more-than-usual impatient glee. “Thank you!” Emily yelled as she and her father started off. “Don’t sound so excited,” scolded our hostess in a proper tone barely appreciated by the deluge of happy children. “I’m not!” she screamed back. “I’m really excited!” My father and I made our way out the door: I up and down the granite steps, then across the grassy lawn to the dock. “Shoreline? Sure. It’s a nice town,” pronounced a voice from behind me. “Who’s that?” I asked turning to see the amiable-looking stranger I’d seen enthroned at the window table earlier. “That’s Frank,” said Emily. “He took us out to the ferry.” I turned back around to see that Frank had joined us on the steps of the restaurant. “Daddy, I’d like you to meet Frank. He’s the ferry master,” Emily announced as I became what we in local argot call the initial’s eyes. Frank extended his hand. I took it, shaking with what I hoped was a secure grip. “The pleasure is mine,” Frank said as his ocean blue eyes strayed toward Emily and mine. “And it’s a pleasure to meet you Emily. I can tell by the color of your eyes you’re part Bouvier.” Emily looked up at him, the corners of her mouth tilted upward in her most distinctive impersonation of her mother: “Father, please. Why don’t we move off to the corner while Emily introduces you to...” “Daddy, please!” Em stopped herself, a shot across the bow.
