The plant is owned by Oncor Electric Delivery, a subsidiary of Energy Future Holdings, Inc. (EFI). The plant is intended to help satisfy Oncor's obligation to deliver 1,100,000 MWh of power to Texas in 2030. If there are no unforeseen problems, the facility will become the most seawater desalination plant in the United States. Background The Texas Water Development Board voted on September 4, 2017 to approve the Seabrook facility. On October 19, 2017, Oncor announced that the Seabrook plant would cost approximately $2.1 billion to construct. When completed, the plant is projected to cost $83 million annually in operating costs. The project was evaluated through the Texas Water Development Board's Salinity Regulation Plan. The TWDB considers several factors before approving a project, including project costs, timing to the need, effectiveness, and implementation. Loan Guarantee On January 16, 2018, the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) announced that it would provide a loan guarantee to construct the Seabrook plant. The guarantee was announced as a result of the announcement of Oncor Energy's proposed acquisition of Energy Future Holdings (EFI). In August 2018, the federal government revealed that the loan guarantee was for $1.05 billion and that the loan guarantee was expected to be paid back by 2037. The guarantee was provided in the form of a 10% loan guarantee, which is provided to renewable energy projects. Power generation In the future, the plant will provide up to 350,000 MWh a year. The majority of the power will be provided by a 3,000 MW plant, with the remainder of the power provided by smaller plants. The project includes constructing a pumping station, a seawater intake, and several seawater desalination plants. Power generation will be primarily provided by three seawater desalination plants (SWDPS) with each plant having the capacity to provide 500,000 MWh per year. The SWDPS will use reverse osmosis (RO) technology, in order to provide fresh water for the plant. The SWDPS is expected to use 12.8 million gallons of
